Taler question

In response to the question of the 1472 "taler," Venice struck a "lira" dated 1472 and weighing 6.5 grams. In 1474 Milan struck a "testone" weighing 9.8 grams.

Although they were not physically taler in size, they were heavier than existing coinage and are considered "forerunners" by some.

As a recent subscriber to World Coin News, let me compliment you on your publication. After over 20 years in U.S. numismatics, I am one of those who has left due to the speculator, as was so well pointed out in an interview you published some weeks back. There are many of us U.S. collectors entering the world-coin field for this very reason.

May I offer some thoughts for future articles in WCN, aimed at cultivating the large influx of previous U.S. collectors now entering the world field?

Your advertisers list by initials the organizations they belong to. We are familiar with ANA and PNG, but many of the world-coin organizations we are not. How about a monthly or biweekly editorial on one such organization, who to contact for membership, the organization's main focus and purpose, etc.?

A listing of world mint addresses and whether or not they sell current numismatic issues directly. Also, for countries that do not mint, a list of who does mint their coins. Realizing this is not a short list, it could be printed over a long period of time, covering a half-dozen countries at a time.

Badly needed is a listing of any world-coin clubs in existence here in the United States. Many of us who have left the U.S. scene to embrace world coins find ourselves a little out in the cold at the old local clubs.

I am sure many of your readers have other ideas. Why not publish an invitation to your readership to send in ideas?

Editor's note: A couple of the things Mr. Harrison mentioned are already in place. Mintdata, which runs periodically and last appeared in the May 21 issue, lists the mint address information requested. World Coin Roundup, which appears almost weekly, lists the information on countries that do not mint their own coins. A third request, for a club listing, has also been discussed.

Dubrovnic vacation

I have just returned from a short vacation in Dubrovnic on the Dalmation coast of Yugoslavia. The exchange rate as of mid-April was around 240 dinars to the U.S. dollar.

The largest denomination coin is 10 dinars (about four cents), and coins have consequently all but disappeared from use in everyday commerce, but can still be found in cash drawers. Amounts often are rounded off to the nearest 10 dinar, which is the smallest note in circulation. Drivers and police seem to ignore parking meters in the larger cities which take on dinar (quarter-cent) coins.

All coin series produced since 1955 (except aluminum) can be found in use, which is both interesting and confusing — four different one-dinar coins, three metals, two diameters; two dinar Y-45 the same diameter as five dinar Y-82; two dinar Y-81 similar in size to one dinar Y-37, Y-42 and Y-A45, etc.

The National Bank of Yugoslavia currently has a system to attract and funnel hard currencies directly into official channels. Bank Dinar Checks in 100D, 200D, 500D, and 1,000D denominations are sold in banks, hotels, etc., at face value in hard currencies. These checks may then be exchanged at a 10-percent discount for tour excursions and at government-managed shops and restaurants.

These checks are all the same size, in different colors by denomination, and are stamped by the issuing agency and have a coupon that is torn off at the perforations at time of sale. The checks bear a date of Jan. 1, 1985, and presumably have been in use since that time.

Yugoslavia is a beautiful country, inexpensive to visit with wonderful food, unequaled scenery, rich in history, and varied in culture. There is much more to vacationing in Europe than Paris, London and Rome, and I suggest you consider Yugoslavia next time. You won't be disappointed.

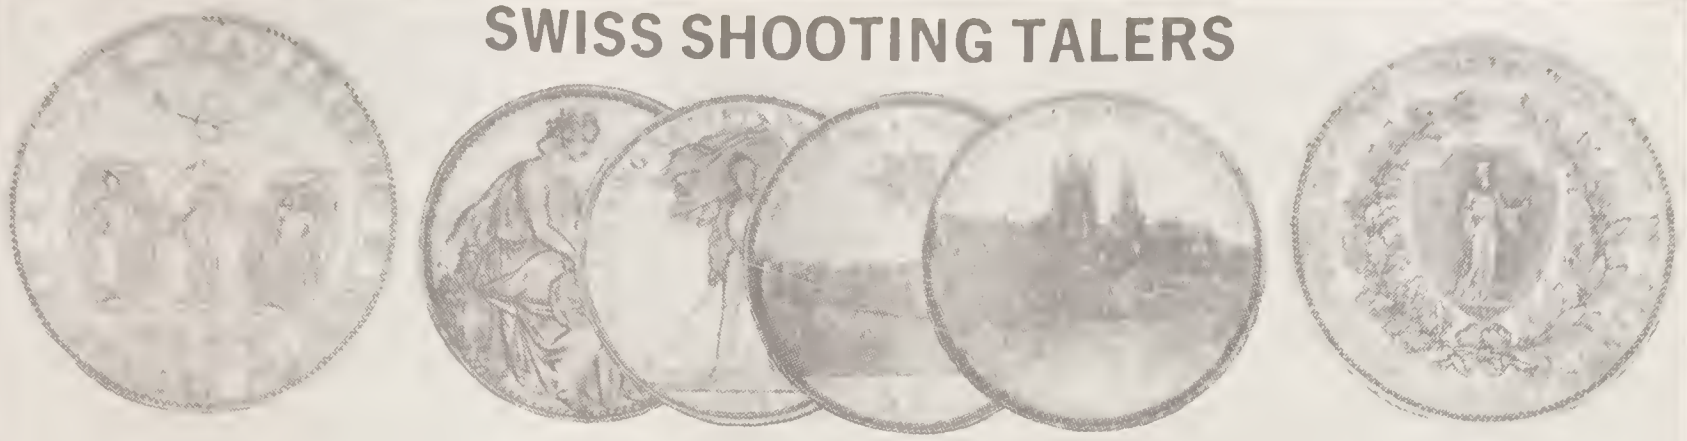
SWISS SHOOTING TALERS



MOST SWISS ARE AVID COLLECTORS

The Swiss, like the Germans, are great collectors. They may or may not collect coins, but most collect something — It's easy to see the results of this collecting "ethic" or collecting "habit" in every large town throughout Switzerland. Just go to the museums!

There you can see items that the people collected throughout the years, later to donate to the museums so everyone could see. For example in Basel, famous for city view coins, you can see the finest collection of coins of Basel in the world. They are on public display, along with other items from the past, in just one of many museums in the city. Here we actually walked through recreated rooms of the 13, 14 and 15th centuries. How fascinating it was to touch a table that some family ate dinner on in the 1400's, before the first dated taler was issued. How fascinating to actually "plink" a harpsichord that some young musician practiced on in the 1700's.

And it's equally fascinating to watch the people of Basel look in amazement at the old coinage of their own city from the 1500's, 1600's and succeeding centuries. There was no doubt in my mind that these Sunday afternoon museum goers were true collectors by nature. So it is no surprise to see the turnouts at the Swiss Coin Fairs. They are jam packed!

COIN COLLECTING IN SWITZERLAND

Like in the USA most novice collectors concentrate on the decimal coins, filling "holes" and collecting by date. The more advanced collectors gravitate toward the larger coins, the regular issue 5 Francs (like our silver dollars) and the Shooting Talers (same size, 37mm). Although they are commemorative coins, Shooting Talers are avidly collected, probably because they are so beautiful. Most carry the denomination "5 Francs", and they were legal tender for years and years, just like the regular issue Silver 5 Francs were. And, many of them did circulate, so much so that the average grade is probably VF to EF on many issues.

Even more advanced collectors concentrate on earlier talers and Canton (state) coins issued prior to the Swiss Confederation in the mid 19th Century.

There is a distinct parallel to the collecting habits of the Swiss and the U.S. Collector. The more advanced the collector, the earlier he collects. There are other distinct parallels between the coinage too, but be assured that the Swiss collector is always active in some phase of numismatics. His current attraction seems to be lifted right from his U.S. collector counterpart — he is seeking BU coins. And he's having trouble, because there just aren't many BU's to go around! And so prices are going up, although slowly at present.

WORLDWIDE APPEAL OF SWISS SHOOTING TALERS

Swiss Shooting Talers are certainly among the most beautiful coins in the world and are a long time favorite of collectors everywhere. They are special favorites of old time U.S. collectors who delighted in their marvelous beauty and detail. These collectors worked on their Shooting Taler sets in the recent past. They collected them because of their beauty and because of their investment possibilities. And they've not been disappointed!

In the very recent past, many U.S. collectors, tired of the instability and incredibly high prices in the U.S. market, again looked at Swiss coins as a logical alternative to U.S. coins.

The regular issue coins feature a Seated Liberty, or bust of Liberty, just as classic U.S. coins do. They're similar in size to U.S. coins and they cost only a fraction of the price of their counterparts here.

And it's only a natural extension of this interest in the regular issue coins that first introduces the collectors to the incredible beauty of Swiss Shooting Talers. Many U.S. collectors are now assembling collections of Swiss Shooting Talers as fast as they can find the coins.

THE SWISS SHOOTING TALER SET

The Shooting Taler series consists of seventeen silver dollar sized coins issued to commemorate the national shooting festivals held each year throughout Switzerland. They commemorate locations as diverse as the ancient Roman frontier city of Chur, guarding trade routes through the Alps just north of Italy, to the lovely French speaking city of La Chaux de Fonds, where the Swiss craftsmen lovingly produce many of their world famous precision watches and music boxes.

Other Swiss Shooting Talers are from more internationally famous locations: Zurich, Basel, Bern, the capital city, Lucerne, one of the loveliest of all the Swiss cities, St. Gallen, home of much of the fine lace and linen of the area, Schaffhausen, on the Rhine River near the famous Falls of the Rhine, and Schwyz, the cradle of Swiss democracy where the first Swiss Constitution was written in 1291. The constitution is still in Schwyz, on display for everyone to see.

In all, seventeen coins depict seventeen national shooting festivals and comprise the Swiss Shooting Taler set, issued from 1842 to 1885.

AVAILABILITY OF SWISS SHOOTING TALERS TODAY

Swiss Shooting Talers are extremely scarce in BU condition today. Prices on all 19th Century Issues in BU are edging up as the available supply of choice coins is either exported from Switzerland or quickly absorbed into homeland collections.

All BU Swiss coins prior to 1948 are becoming more difficult to find in dealers' stocks in Switzerland; even at the largest coin shows, choice coins disappear in the first few moments of the show. And the supply continues to dry up, and the demand continues to increase. There is strong upward price pressure on almost every BU Swiss coin.

On recent buying trips to visit suppliers in Europe I have never been able to buy enough BU Shooting Talers. High quality Shooting Talers disappear from the market almost as soon as they appear.

The quality I always strive for is that desired by U.S. collectors: a relative absence of hairlines and abrasions. These blemishes were caused over the years by handling by non-numismatists. Even though perfection doesn't exist in Swiss Shooting Talers, used as they were as legal tender souvenirs of shooting festivals, their popularity has probably never been greater with collectors worldwide. They are the most sought after coins in the world at the present time.

Now, for your collecting pleasure, we present the Seventeen Swiss Shooting Talers.

'Things will be different' vows Calgary '88 Olympic-coin official

news

The Royal Canadian Mint's recently hired manager of communications promises "things will be different" with the 1988 Calgary Winter Olympics coin program.

Jocelyne Soulodre made the pledge April 21 in an address to the Ontario Numismatic Association convention in Stratford, and cited two reasons for her belief.

"First, this time, the Royal Canadian Mint is in control of the 1988 OCP," Soulodre said. "We have planned the program ourselves based on the experience that comes from years of day-to-day contact with collectors. We're here for the long haul — not to make a fast buck. That means we've designed the OCP knowing that we will live with the consequences of the program we've planned."

Soulodre cited mandate as her second cause for optimism.

"The government of Canada has pledged $200 million to the games," she said. "The money we make from the OCP will go directly to the federal government's consolidated-revenue fund. Thus freed from the obligation to raise an unreasonable amount of money, the 1988 series will be affordable.

"In other words, the Calgary games will not be financed on the backs of coin collectors."

Despite that, Soulodre said the mint expects the program to raise a minimum of $30 million — "and if our program is as good as we know it is, we should raise about $50 million."

Soulodre also emphasized the program will not be changed or expanded, and defended the mint's ballyhooed research program.

"Our research told us that you did not want the kind of variations in either finish, mint marks or packaging that double or triple the number of coins that must be bought in order to complete a set," she said. "What numismatists will get in the 1988 Olympic Coin Program is an issue designed with the collector in mind."

Since being hired by the mint in March, Soulodre said she has learned a lot about the history of Olympic coins — and she was frank in her assessment of that history.

"From Helsinki on, the road of Olympic coins, in the eyes of many collectors, has been one way — downhill," she said. "Hosting nations have developed Olympic coin programs that sometimes appeared to be motivated by greed, more than numismatic interests."

In closing, Soulodre said, "We hope to make numismatic history with [the Olympic-coin program] — we are counting on you to help us make it happen."

RCM responds to building controversy

By Robert Aaron

Royal Canandian Mint officials have responded vigorously to critics who have accused the mint of demolishing its late Gothic-style building on Ottawa's Sussex Drive in contravention of existing heritage policies.

The controversy arose after the mint began necessary renovations to its Ottawa plant. Currently, mint operations are spread over four sites: the original Sussex Drive building, part of the federal government printing bureau at Sacre Coeur Blvd. in Hull, P.Q., two floors of the Place Vanier office tower at 355 River Road in suburban Vanier, Ontario, and the 9-year-old mint building in Winnipeg.

The mint has been paying more than $1.5 million annually to rent buildings and equipment, and internal studies show that considerable savings could be made by consolidating its operations in the old Ottawa building and the new Winnipeg plant.

The plans call for the transfer of all domestic circulating coin production to Winnipeg and the refurbishing and conversion of the original building to offices and a numismatic showplace.

Treasury Board approval for the $21 million project was given two years ago. In January of this year the mint obtained the endorsement of a municipal building design committee and paid $90,000 for a building permit. The committee includes heritage representatives and members of the National Capital Commission.

Plans called for a complete interior gutting of the building, except the 1936 refinery addition on the structure's north side. The mint has been added to and changed so many times since it was completed in 1907 that the main level alone has more than six different floor levels.

Work began in March, but there was no public reaction until early May when renovations to the exterior first became visible to the public. When the contractors working on the mint interior got to the outer walls, they could see light between the granite blocks. Two independent consulting firms were called in, and both agreed that it would be dangerous to proceed because the walls were unsafe.

Because the walls could blow down in a strong wind, the consulting engineers agreed that the best alternative would be to take them down piece by piece and reconstruct them on the same foundations with appropriate support and mortar.

As a result, each exterior block is being carefully removed one at a time and transported to a storage site. When preparations have been made for reconstruction, each block will be returned to th site and replaced. The additional cost of the operation is estimated at about $1 million.

With the second story of the mint building completely gone by May 8, except for the steel framework, a great outcry arose from the National Capital Commission, the Department of Public Works, various heritage activists, and

San Marino issues two-coin Bach set

The two coins in San Marino's Bach set share a common obverse.

In one of many coin and medallic issues struck to commemorate the Bach tercentenary and the European Year of Music, the Republic of San Marino issued a two-coin set May 20 depicting Bach and the allegorical symbol of music.

The two Guido Veroi-designed coins have identical obverses — a crowned crest with a multi-turreted castle flanked by oak and olive leaves, the national name and the legend "Libertas."

The 500-lira's reverse carries a Chagall-like figure representing music seated on a pedestal playing an organ. The designer's name, date and denomination surround the design.

A large, almost caricatured bust of Bach dominates the 1,000-lira reverse, with his name, the denomination and date surrounding.

Both coins are struck in .835-fine silver. The 500 lira has a denomination of 29 millimeters and weighs 11 grams. The 1,000 lira has a diameter of 31.4 millimeters and weighs 14.6 grams.

Maximum mintages for the two coins is 80,000. Proof versions are planned.

Strong bourse at Mexico City show

By Don Bailey

Several important Mexican numismatic anniversaries, recently announced Mexican coin programs and strong bourse and auction activity contributed to the success of the 12th International Numismatic Convention, held May 9-12 at the Maria Isabel Sheraton, Mexico City.

The convention's dates were selected to coincide with the 450th anniversary of the Spanish royal edict of May 11, 1535, which authorized the first mint in the Americas in the City of Mexico, New Spain, Tenochtitlan to the Aztecs.

Preconvention activities included a Mexican grill at the Casa Pedro Domeq and visits to the old Mexico City mint and the Banco de Mexico numismatic museum.

At the old mint, gold World Cup soccer commemoratives were available for examination. The coins are being struck over a one-year period to mark the football championship, which will be held in July 1986 in Mexico City.

Guadelupe Monroy conducted the tour of the numismatic museum, where delegates were able to buy 1980-, 1981- and 1984-dated year sets. The 1984 sets include the 100 pesos, two varieties of 50 pesos, 20 pesos, five pesos, and presumably the last 20 centavos to be issued.

The first major convention activity, an inaugural breakfast, featured Napaleon Gomez, general director of the Mexico City Mint, speaking on the mint's 1985-86 coinage program. Gomez disclosed the mint will be striking a 450th-anniversary commemorative medal in silver, gold, bi-metallic gold with silver, and cupronickel with brass. One of the medals was on display for the remainder of the convention.

Gomez also said sales of the Libertad one-ounce silver piece have been about 250,000 a week, a pace rapid enough to cause quick sellouts of the 1982, 1983 and 1984 pieces. Mintages for those Libertads was 1 million each; Gomez said 3 million 1985-dated pieces will be struck unless market conditions justify a higher mintage. He added that Libertads will soon be released and sold in Mexico.

With the introduction of the World Cup coins and commemorative medals, Mexico has undertaken its most extensive coin program ever, making the Mexico Mint the third or fourth largest mint in terms of production throughout the world.

The mint's subdirector, Tadeo Casso, said the World Cup coins will be issued in five denominations — 25 pesos, 50 pesos and 100 pesos in silver, and 250

Arcadius: The pathetic reign

It is evident that relative greatness begat absolute mediocrity.

By Herbert K. Beals

"The genius of Rome," Edward Gibbon remarked, "expired with Theodosius." And Gibbon had to look no further for his proof than the two sons who succeeded Theodosius. In the West, the imperial purple passed in January 395 to 11-year-old Flavius Honorius, who was under the guardianship of a Romanized Vandal general named Stilicho. As for the Eastern realm, Theodosius bequeathed power to his elder son, 18-year-old Flavius Arcadius, who was to be supervised by Rufinus, the court's praetorian prefect.

Arcadius' career as Roman emperor was a pathetic affair in which Rufinus and a succession of powers behind the throne connived to manipulate him. He was, in the words of fifth-century historian Zosimus, "extremely feeble in mind," with only a limited capacity to manage the administrative complexities of an empire that sometimes defied understanding.

The young emperor's troubles began almost immediately. Rufinus encouraged Arcadius to marry his daughter, in hopes of strengthening his imperial role through family ties. Meanwhile, the prefect traveled to Antioch, where he ordered a particularly brutal execution of an upstanding and popular official named Lucianus. While he was away, however, one of the court's chamberlains, a eunuch named Eutropius, began making other nuptial arrangements for the emperor.

In Zosimus' account, Eutropius waxed to Arcadius over "a young lady of remarkable beauty" who lived in the household of Promotus. Named Aelia Eudoxia, she was the daughter of Bauto, a Frankish general who died in Roman service. When Eutropius showed a picture of Eudoxia to the emperor, Zosimus wrote, "he inflamed Arcadius with so violent a passion for the lady, that he at length persuaded him to marry her."

This all seems to have been kept a carefully guarded secret from Rufinus, who (if we may believe Zosimus) was sure that on the emperor's wedding day his daughter would become empress.

When the festive wedding party, sprinkling garlands as they went, danced their way to the house of Promotus and emerged with Eudoxia, Rufinus, humiliated, angered and outmaneuvered, was eager to learn who had deceived him. Not surprisingly, when he discovered who was responsible, he was determined to remove Eutropius no matter what.

However, a full-scale military crisis erupted in the Balkans, distracting Rufinus, however briefly, from court intrigue to the demands of a disgruntled horde of Goths, who had been settled in and around Thrace since the time of Valens. Their leader, Alaric, "became seditious and disobedient to the laws, for he was displeased that he was not entrusted with the command of some other military forces besides the barbarians, which Theodosius had allotted to him when he assisted in the deposition of the usurper Eugenius" (Zosimus).

Evidently Rufinus tried to turn this Gothic unrest to his advantage in his feud with Eutropius. This is one way Zosimus accounted for the secret invita-

For four years, Eudoxia controlled the empire — as much as anyone could.

Honorius was an example of the empire's expired genius.

tion Eutropius extended Alaric to ravage the Macedonian and Greek countryside. Gibbon said the invitation was meant to increase the public confusion. Whatever his motives, it was a policy skirting on disaster, and it only hastened Rufinus' doom.

His twisted plans — some say to make himself emperor — soon produced unexpected and unwanted consequences. Stilicho, observing the unabating Gothic ravages in Greece, decided (with Honorius' rubber-stamp approval) to deploy a Western army, with the ostensible motive of assisting the beleaguered Acheans. It was, Stilicho believed, still one empire, and there was certainly no reason the Western emperor should not come to the assistance of his Eastern colleague. This was aid, however, which Rufinus had neither counted on nor wanted. And so, according to Zosimus, he "endeavored by all the art in his power to prevent the expedition of Stilicho into the east."

Stilicho's real motives in sending troops to Greece may well have been no better than Rufinus' opposition to them, because once his army had temporarily restrained Alaric's Goths, they pillaged the countryside themselves. And we know that after Stilicho returned to Italy, he sent one of his generals, a Goth named Gainas, to Constantinople at the head of a large force, ostensibly to augment Arcadius' Eastern army. However, its real aim was Rufinus' assassination.

A contemporary poet, Caludius Claudianus, an avid admirer of Stilicho, describes with obvious relish — and considerable poetic embellishment — the parade-field scene outside Constantinople at which Arcadius and Rufinus went to greet Gainas' assembled troops. On Nov. 27, 395, amid fluttering banners adorned with multi-colored dragons, Rufinus was hacked to death by troops sent to be under his command, while his youthful emperor looked on helplessly. It was a measure of how low the estate of Roman emperors had fallen that the assassins' blows fell not on Arcadius but his praetorian prefect.

While Gainas obligingly assumed command of the Eastern armies on Arcadius' behalf, the emperor himself fell increasingly under the influence of the eunuch Eutropius.

Coins, of course, bore Arcadius' portrait, even if his status was scarcely more than that of imperial nonentity. His wife, Eudoxia, would also be extended the honor — now somewhat hollow — of having her attractive features appear on the empire's currency.

Interestingly enough, while coins with Arcadius' portrait were issued at mints in both the Eastern and Western parts of the empire, Eudoxia's coinage was restricted to Eastern mints. She was, as events would prove, probably more worthy of her imperial honors, however hollow or limited, than her husband was of his.

There were now at least three people — Gainas, Eutropius and Eudoxia — vying for Arcadius' less-than-perfect attention; matters of state, wrote Zosimus, were almost beyond his comprehension. While Gainas evidently spent much of his time in the field battling his unruly Gothic countrymen and newcomers-to-pillage called Huns, Eutropius and Eudoxia plied their manipulative skills at Constantinople, "governing Arcadius," Zosimus claimed, "as if he were a sheep."

It is not always clear whose side Gainas was really fighting for, nor is it any more certain what designs he may have had for ending the influence of his potential rivals at court. But when Eutropius was named consul in 399, Gainas could no longer bear the affront to his dignity; he told the emperor that unless Eutropius went he would no longer press the war against the barbarians. Zosimus wrote that Arcadius immediately stripped the eunuch "of all his dignities, and dismissed him."

Not satisfied with this, Gainas pressed for Eutropius' execution, which in fact was carried out at the emperor's orders sometime late in 399, despite the pleadings of the Christian patriarch St. John Chrysostom.

This reduced the number of those who controlled the emperor's malleable will to two — the empress Eudoxia and a none-too-reliable Gothic general who ranged the countryside like a warlord. The latter seems to have held some preeminence only briefly, for his treasonous tendencies quickly became too much for even Arcadius to bear when he attempted (unsuccessfully) to take Constantinople by force. Gainas later died, ironically, at the hands of Huns lead by Uldes, with whom Arcadius hastily entered into an alliance.

For four years, from 400 to 404, Eudoxia seems to have been effectively in control of the Eastern empire — to whatever extent it could be controlled. Zosimus wrote that the patriarch St. John Chrysostom did not find the empress much to his liking, "instigating the populous against the empress in his usual sermons."

Eudoxia's death came prematurely in October, 404, the result of a miscarriage. Her less-than-brilliant husband lived on another four years, having had the good fortune to obtain the counsel of a wise and sensible praetorian prefect named Anthemius. Details of how the emperor died are not reported by Zosimus, but we do know he was only 31 at the time.

It is no small irony that this emperor, a veritable nullity, managed to remain nominal head of the empire's Eastern provinces for 13 years during some of the most chaotic times on record. And if that were not enough, he succeeded in his rather short life to outlive not only a young and beautiful wife but three conniving, untrustworthy and sometimes murderous subordinates. He was founder, almost by accident, of a separate and distinct Eastern Roman empire. Whatever else may be said of him, he stumbled into history as one of its luckiest figures. ■

The most significant British coins since man first orbited the moon!

Now, for the first time in nearly two decades, British coinage bears a new Royal Portrait. In all the universe, only 125,000 collectors can own this historic Proof Set!

Much like man's early ventures into space, changes in British coinage are as significant as they are rare.

Thus, it's only fitting that the last time there was a change to the Royal Portrait that appears on all British coins—1968—was also the year man first orbited the moon.

This year, nearly two decades later, the coins of Britain bear a new portrait of Queen Elizabeth II.

Now you can acquire the seven legal tender coins of this historic 1985 British Proof Set, as well as the 1985 Silver Proof Pound—but you must act quickly.

Given the infrequency of changes to the Royal Portrait, collectors worldwide consider a sellout very likely. Especially collectors from North America. Because—of the 125,000 Proof Sets to be minted—only a small portion will be allocated for North American collectors.

Limited mintages of a Proof Set with a portrait change of this magnitude would be reason enough to anticipate a sellout. But the 1985 British Proof Set contains two additional "firsts" that will even further enhance demand for these coins.

First, it introduces the Welsh Pound... the second in a four-year series of one-pound coins honouring the four countries of the United Kingdom. Since this is a one-year-only coin, 50,000 individual Proof Pounds have been minted in .925 sterling silver. Of these, only 10,000 have been set aside for North America.

And, second, the 1985 British Proof Set is the first-ever decimal Proof Set to be struck without the half-penny coin—withdrawn from circulation last year.

Money-Back Guarantee

It all adds up to an opportunity that's not only rare, it's risk-free. Because the British Royal Mint guarantees that each proof coin sold will meet the quality standards the Mint has upheld for over 1000 years...or your money back! Just return the coins to us within 30 days of receipt, in original condition.

You have nothing to lose and everything to gain as you become one of the few collectors worldwide to own the most significant British Proof Coins in nearly two decades!

Kids, crowns and coins

By Paul Downing

From pablum princes sprung questionable kings and queens

The vainglorious king of a glorious age, Louis XIV ascended the throne in 1643 and ruled almost 72 years.

Mary was seven or eight days old when her father died.

That was not uncommon for an infant in the 16th century, but the result was most uncommon. Mary immediately became Queen of Scots.

Ivan the Terrible may have been a Muscovite Dennis the Menace, but he was not so terrible when he succeeded to his father's title. He was three years old.

Ethelred the Unready had good reason to be unready to rule England. He was no more than 10 years old when he became king.

These are only three examples of many who succeeded to thrones at early ages. There were many others, much closer to our own time, and their coins make an unusual collection for anyone interested in historical oddities.

For the most outstanding example of a baby king, we have to go back only to 1886 and Alfonso XIII, grandfather of the present king of Spain. Alfonso bettered the record of Mary of Scotland by a whole week. He became king at birth.

His father, Alfonso XII, died of tuberculosis in November 1885. He left two daughters and a pregnant queen. She gave birth in May 1886 to a son, who immediately was proclaimed king.

Mary, Queen of Scots, was beheaded. Ivan the Terrible spent his last years in a monastery, repenting his crimes. Ethelred lost his throne to a Danish usurper. Alfonso XIII died in exile. This may say something about the hazards of succeeding to a throne at an early age. It also adds zest to the quest for their coins.

In this survey of monarchs who have toddled to the throne, I have chosen the age of 12 as the upper limit of childhood.

Many rulers gained regal status while in their teens. Queen Victoria, who had one of the longest reigns in history, was barely 18 when she became queen. She was judged capable of ruling for herself, but all those discussedhere had regents or regency councils to make their decisions for them.

Except for a few European countries, I won't go back more than 200 or 300 years. Most people wouldn't recognize the names of child rulers farther back than that, and their coins — if any — would be rare. More people are familiar with the history of England that most other countries, so I will start there.

Ethelred II was about 10 when he became king of England in 978. He lost his throne, but was on the way toward gaining it back when he died in 1016. The appellation "unready" means lacking in counsel rather than unprepared.

Henry III, nephew of Richard the Lionhearted and son of John, one of the country's least-admired kings, was nine when his father died. That was in 1216, as King John was trying to undo the effects of the Magna Carta, which the nobles had forced him to sign. Henry ruled unevenly, but long; he died in 1272 after 56 years as king.

Richard II, son of the Black Prince, was 10 years old when he became king in 1377. It is said that he grew so weary at his coronation that he fell asleep at the end and was carried out of Westminster Abbey in the capable arms of his companion and tutor, Sir Simon Burley. His own errors and the vengefulness of some of his nobles resulted, 10 years later, in his being forced to sign Burley's death warrant on a treason charge. Burley's Ethelred (left) was 10 when he ascended the British throne. Henry III (right) was nine when he began his reign in 1216. However, Scotland's Alexander III (center) beat them both. He was eight.

Last of Scotland's adolsecent rulers, James VI took the throne at 13 months, later uniting Scotland and England and gaining biblical immortality of a sort.

worst crime was being faithful to his king.

Henry VI was about nine months old when he became king in 1422. He was also the heir to the throne of France, and was crowned as its king in 1431. He might have avoided a lot of later bloodshed had he consolidated his dual monarchy, but the military successes of Joan of Arc and Charles VII eventually drove the English out of most of France.

Henry was more suited for the church than for kingship, and he became more withdrawn as the Wars of the Roses dragged on. He reigned for 38 years until 1461 and again from 1470-71 (the result of a turn of fortune) before he died.

Edward VI was the son for whom Henry VIII married six wives and caused a breach between the Church of England and the Church of Rome. He was nine years old when his father died in 1547. But he was sickly, and died of tuberculosis at 16. He was succeeded by Bloody Mary and Elizabeth I, both half-sisters.

Scotland, it seems, had more than its share of pre-pubescent kings and queens. The ages given here are approximate because I don't have the exact dates.

Malcolm IV the Maiden was 12 in 1153 when he succeeded his grandfather, David I, the youngest son of Malcolm III. Malcolm III had defeated the usurper Macbeth in 1057.

Alexander III was eight when he became king of Scots in 1249, and 10 when he married the 11-year-old daughter of Henry III of England, who had been another child king.

He was succeeded in 1286 by his granddaughter Margaret, daughter of Eric II of Norway. She was known as the Maid of Norway. Her reign, in name only, began in 1286 when she was three. She was supposed to marry a six-year-old son of Edward I of England, but she died on the ship which was taking her to England in 1290. She was seven years old.

David II, son of Robert the Bruce, was an off-and-on king of Scotland, but through no fault of his own. He was five when he became king, and was ill-equipped to carry on his father's liberation of Scotland from English domination. He was driven out of the country by the English, and lived in France from 1334 to 1341. He was taken prisoner by the English in 1346 and ransomed in 1357 for 100,000 marks of silver, which was "a king's ransom" at the time. Most of it never was paid.

After David II came the Stuarts, and continued strife with the neighbors to the south. From 1406 to 1603 there was a series of six Scottish kings named James and a queen named Mary. All but James IV were children when they gained the throne. James IV had reached the advanced age of 15 when he became king in 1488.

They were James I (1406), age 12, who was a prisoner of the English and was not crowned until 1424; James II (1437), age six; James III (1460), age nine; James V (1513), one year, who died of wounds after being defeated in battle by his uncle, Henry VIII, in 1542; Mary, his week-old daughter, who was queen of France for a time as well as of Scotland, but who was beheaded by her cousin, Elizabeth I; and James VI (1567), who was 13 months old when his mother abdicated.

James VI became James I of England and finally united the two countries. He is best known, however, for the King James Bible, which was produced in his reign and was named in his honor.

France had few baby kings, but those few were notable.

Louis XIV was four when he ascended the throne in 1643. He was only a few days short of his 77th birthday when he died in 1715 after a reign of 72 years, certainly one of the longest in history. He had good reason to say "L'etat, c'est moi."

Understandably, he outlived his children and was succeeded by his great-grandson. Louis XV was five years old, and he reigned for 58 years before he died in 1774.

"Apres nous le deluge" is credited by some to Louis XV and by others to Madame Pompadour. Whoever said it was a perceptive political prognosticator. Louis XVI, the gentle king who would have been happy as a gentleman farmer, was caught in the deluge. His head went under the guillotine in January 1793 along with that of his queen, Marie Antoinette.

They left an eight-year-old son who is numbered as Louis XVII, but who was king in name only. It is reported that he died in 1795 while in the close confinement which began when he was imprisoned with his parents. Did he die or was he spirited away and the body of another boy substituted? The mystery of the Lost Dauphin will forever remain so.

Ivan IV the Terrible, as mentioned earlier, was three when he became grand duke of Muscovy in 1533. He took over the reins of government at age 14. Three years later, in 1547, he declared himself the first czar of Russia.

MONARCHS

He apparently was subject to tremendous rages, sadistic fits of an absolute autocrat, followed by long periods of just and enlightened rule. In later years the rages became more frequent. He had the inhabitants of Novgorod slaughtered in 1570 on suspicion of conspiracy to revolt, killed his son Ivan in 1580 and murdered a metropolitan of the church and his relatives for slight cause. Ivan's last years were spent in a monastery. He died in 1584.

Peter I of Russia ruled jointly with Ivan V from 1682, when Peter was 10, to 1689. Then he became the sole czar, ruling until his death in 1725.

Ivan VI never knew he was a czar while he was one, and he never knew freedom during his 24-year life. He was eight weeks old when he was proclaimed czar in 1740. His mother, a German duchess, and her German advisors were overthrown the following year. Ivan spent the rest of his life in prison.

Perhaps the most precocious of all baby kings was Amalaric, a Visigoth who was born in about 502. He became the ruler of the Visigoth kingdom, which included Iberia and southern France, in 507. One source states that he ruled alone beginning in 510. That would make him about eight years old.

Spain was long fragmented and subject to foreign domination, first by the Romans, then by the Visigoths and Moors. The Christian kingdoms of Castile and Leon were united by marriage early in the 13th century. (The names, by the way, mean "castle" and "lion" in Spanish, which explains the quartered arms of castles and lions as seen on modern Spanish coins.)

Ferdinand IV became king of the two united countries in 1295, when he was about nine years old. He was only about 26 when he died and was succeeded by his infant son, Alfonso. Alfonso XI (the Implacable) died of plague in 1350, when he was about 38.

A similar succession happened again toward the end of the same century. Enrique (Henry) III became king when he was 10 or 11, in 1390. He died 16 years later and was succeeded by Juan II, who was about one year old.

Modern Spain emerged from the marriage of Ferdinand V of Aragon and Isabella I of Castile-Leon in 1469. The last of the Moorish rulers were driven from Spain in 1492, the same year that Ferdinand and Isabella gave an eccentric Genoan named Cristoforo Colombo a chance to prove his absurd notion that one could go east by sailing west.

Carlos II was about four when he succeeded in 1665. His death in 1700 triggered the War of the Spanish Succession and the beginning of the French Bourbon dynasty in Spain.

Ferdinand and Isabella created modern Spain and laid the groundwork for the country's preeminence as a colonial power. Another two of the same names contributed to its final decline. By the end of the reign of Ferdinand VII in 1833, Spain had lost all of its New World lands except Cuba. He suspended the ancient Salic law of the Franks so his infant daughter, Isabella, could succeed him.

She did, at the age of two, but her uncle Carlos thought she should play with her dolls and let him be king. The throne finally was secured for her, but she lost it through her own weakness and immoral personal behavior. Exiled in 1868, she abdicated in 1870.

The crown went briefly to Amadeo, son of Vittorio Emanuele of Italy, but he gave it up as an impossible job in 1873. Isabella's son became king as Alfonso XII in 1874, when he was 17, but he died before the birth of his son in 1886.

Alfonso XIII, a king at birth, was ousted in 1931 and, like his grandmother, was exiled. He died in 1941.

Portugal was simply part of Iberia under the Romans, the Visigoths and the Moors. Much of its present territory began coming under Christian control around the year 1000, and it became a county (the domain of a count) under the nominal control of the kingdom of Leon in 1064.

Affonso I, the last ruling count of Portugal, was three years old when he came to the title in 1112. A series of wars with his cousin, Alfonso VI of Castile-Leon, and a victory over the Moors at Ourique in 1139 won independence, and Affonso was crowned the first king of Portugal that same year. As count and king he ruled for 73 years, slightly longer than Louis XIV.

Affonso the African was about six when he became king of Portugal in 1438. He was succeeded by his son, Joao II the Perfect, who was perfectly of age.

Another child king of Portugal was Sebastiao, who was three when he succeeded in 1557. He was killed in battle

21 years later.

Maria da Gloria had plenty of problems in her relatively short life, beginning with her accession at age seven. Her father had become emperor of Brazil, a Portuguese possession, in 1822. He liked the job, and renounced the throne of Portugal in his daughter's favor when his father died in 1826. Her uncle, Dom Miguel, was named regent.

He liked his job, too, so much that he decided to make it permanent, and usurped the throne. The little queen went home to papa in Brazil in 1828. Dom Pedro gave up his Brazilian throne and, serving as a general in his daughter's army, finally unseated his younger brother in 1834.

Maria II was declared of age at 15 to avoid another regency. The following year she married Duke Auguste of Leuchtenberg, who happened to be a brother of her father's second wife. That made the bridegroom's younger sister also his mother-in-law, a curious situation which lasted two months. Whether from mother-in-law trouble or some other cause, Duke Auguste died.

The following year Maria was married again, this time to Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, a cousin of Victoria's Prince Albert. Maria died in 1853, leaving eight children. Her eldest teenage son became Pedro V.

Maria da Gloria's father had given up the Brazilian throne to defend his daughter's right. His successor in Brazil was his son Pedro II, who was five years old. Most of us are familiar with Pedro II's coins of later years, when he had a full beard, but gold coins of the early years of his reign show him as a child.

A man of culture and progressive ideas, Pedro II was personally liked and respected by the Brazilians. But he represented a form of government which had become unpopular, and he abdicated in 1889 with the formation of a republic. Dom Pedro died two years later in Paris, three days after his 66th birthday.

As for the man who gave up two crowns and wound up as a king without a throne, Pedro I died in 1834, shortly after seeing his daughter firmly seated on hers. He was not quite 36 years old.

Having worked up to modern times again, we will stay there and review a few recent under-age sovereigns.

Hsuan T'ung, the last emperor of China, occupied two thrones in his lifetime and died as — of all things — a librarian in the city where he had been an emperor. Hsuan T'ung was two years old when he became emperor of China in 1908. He was forced to abdicate in the revolution of 1912, but he continued to live in Peking.

In 1917 he was restored to the throne for a few days before sinking into obscurity. A learned man, he was an admirer of England's Henry VIII and chose the personal name Henry Pu-Yi.

From 1924 he lived under Japanese protection, and he was chosen as regent of the Japanese state of Manchukuo in China in 1932. He became K'ang Te, emperor of Manchukuo, in 1934. After the Japanese defeat in World War II he returned to China and remained under the communist regime as a gardener and librarian in Peking. He died in 1967.

Death in an automobile accident brought Faisal II to the throne of Iraq in 1939. Faisal was three years old when his father, Ghazi I, was killed after a reign of six years. Faisal was assassinated in 1958, at the age of 23.

An interesting series of coins show Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands during a reign of 58 years. She was 10 years old when she succeeded in 1890. Had she chosen to remain queen instead of abdicating in 1948, she would have rivaled Louis XIV, reigning nearly 72 years before her death in 1962.

Mihai of Romania was a king twice. He was 5 years old when his grandfather, Ferdinand I, died in 1927. Since his father had renounced his right to succeed two years earlier, Mihai became king. In 1930 his father, who had been living in Paris with his mistress, changed his mind. He flew back to Romania and was crowned as Carol II. Mihai was demoted to the rank of crown prince.

Carol was forced to abdicate in 1940 by pro-German political forces, and Mihai again became king, a titular one without authority. With German reverses in World War II he and an army coalition removed the governing group and declared in favor of the Allies. (His grandfather, though a member of the Prussian ruling house of Hohenzollern, had sided with the Allies in World War I, a decision made by putting Romanian interests ahead of family loyalty.)

Mihai abdicated, apparently under pressure from the communists, in 1947. Taking the title prince of Hohenzollern, he went into exile in Switzerland.

Ananda Mahidol was 10 years old when he became king of Thailand in 1935. He was assassinated 11 years later.

Petar II Karadjordjevic was 11 when his father, King Aleksandar I of Yugoslavia, was assassinated in 1934. He took over control of the government from the regency of his uncle after the Germans invaded in 1941. Soon afterward he established a government in exile in London.

Petar's reign came to an end when a republic was declared soon after the end of the war in 1945. Living the rest of his life in exile, he died in 1970.

In this review of child monarchs I have made little reference to coins. I don't know if some of the earlier kings even issued any. For most of the later ones, however, coins are available. Many of them have good child portraits.

If you are interested in collecting coins of the child monarchs, the opportunity is certainly there. May you have much pleasure in finding them. ■

Modern world coinage

A status report on countries and their coins

By Colin R. Bruce II

There are just under 200 different currencies being used daily around the world. Within the last 5 years 162 different entities issued coins for general circulation, collectors or as bullion pieces.

At present only about 50 nations are continuously striking coins for general circulation. This appears to be decreasing lately as one nation after another encounters serious inflation making the purchasing power of their circulating coins nil. Some of these countries have entirely converted over to paper currency except for the occasional commemorative or bullion issue.

This analysis includes the years 1981-1985. A (c) after the date indicates a year that circulation coinage was struck while a (b) indicates only bullion pieces were struck. An (n) indicates none (as per our records) while a (?) indicates no report as yet. A plain date indicates that only a collector coin or series was issued for that year. If we have missed a circulation issue or a year of issue for any particular year or for any country, please send in details to World Coin Roundup, c/o World Coin News, 700 E. State St., Iola, WI 54990.

Louis XV: Fires of war

By S.E. Dalton

Social and geopolitical change reflected in the coins of an independent king

The gold coinage of Louis XV, like that of Louis XIV, showed considerable variations, particularly in the first half of his reign. The Louis d'or was the principal gold coin of the series, appearing first in 1715. The Louis d'or and the half Louis d'or of that year have obverse legends reading "Lud. XV D. G. Fr. et Nav." with the date incorporated in the legend. The obverse design is that of the child head (left). The reverse legend reads "Chrs. Reg Vig. et. Imp." and the design displays four double L's in cruciform.

The 1716 issue was comprised of the two, the one, and the one-half Louis d'or. While the obverse and reverse legends are identical to those of the 1715 issue, the reverse design differs; it displays an oval crowned shield bearing three lis. The shield is superimposed on crossed insignia.

The denominations of the 1717-18 issue are the same as those of 1716, except that the child bust is crowned. The reverse design differs significantly in that four shields in cruciform display the arms of France and Navarre. Lis in the angles formed by the shields complete the design.

The issue of 1718-19 consisted of the one and the half Louis d'or. Again, the major differences occur in the designs. The obverse depicts a young, laureate head (right), and the reverse shows a Maltese Cross with the French arms (three lis) in the center.

The two Louis d'or was issued from 1720-22, as were the one and the half Louis d'or. The reverse design was changed to display two large crowned L's dividing three lis.

The issue for the period 1723-25 shows the laureated bust (right) on the obverse; the reverse design features two scripted L's in palms with a crown above.

The last gold coins struck for the early part of Louis XV's reign were one and half Louis d'ors produced from 1726-29. The obverse shows the draped bust (left). The reverse is comprised of two crowned shields displaying the arms of France and Navarre.

The weights of these coins vary considerably. For example, the weight of the half Louis d'or ranged between 4.05 grams and 3.05 grams, the one Louis d'or varied between 8.1 grams and 6.1 grams and the two Louis d'or has a range of 16.15 grams down to 12.2 grams. These variations, which represent differences of between 25 percent and 33.3 percent, indicate the problems which debasement of a currency based on the precious metal content of the coinage can cause. This problem was not confined to France, of course. For centuries most countries had experienced this particular problem, and it was not until the 19th century that this problem was overcome.

In 1713, Austria's Emperor Charles VI issued a royal decree, known as the Pragmatic Sanction, in which he declared his wishes for his daughter, Maria Theresa, to inherit the crown of the Holy Roman Empire on his death. The elective post of emperor had been in the hands of the Austrian Hapsburgs since medieval times, but succession had always been in the male line. The possibility of a female succeeding to the position aroused strong opposition. Consent for such a precedent was necessary from eight electors and the estates of the Hapsburg lands, as well as the major powers of Europe. Such recognition required widespread concessions and the liberal dispersal of Austrian gold.

Official recognition of the Pragmatic Sanction was granted by Spain in 1725, Russia in 1726, England and Holland in 1731, and France in 1738. Bavaria was the one state which steadfastly refused recognition. Charles Albert of the Bavarian House of Wittelsbachs had a somewhat precarious claim on the crown of the Holy Roman Empire, resting mainly on the possible failure of the Hapbsburgs to produce a male heir. When the failure became reality, the Bavarian prince pressed his claim to the full, receiving scant recognition in return.

But the French, Austria's natural enemies, were never ones to pass up an opportunity at Austrian embarrassment. France gave the Bavarian full support in his claim on the imperial diadem. The emperor's death in 1740 set the scene for the opening phases of the War of the Austria Succession. In December of that year, Prussian troops attacked the Austrian province of Silesia, and for the next eight years Europe was wracked by war.

Always willing to experiment with the nation's gold, Louis XV nonetheless reduced the variety of his gold denominations in later years, reducing them to one or two variations on the Louis d'or (far left, and 1747 mature-bust issue, left). Above: the palace at Versailles. Right: In a virtual invitation to war, Charles I (top) named Maria Theresa (bottom) as his heir. The War of the Austrian Succession resulted.

Meanwhile, in France two factions were striving for the king's attention. The aging Fleury, long the king's chief minister, preferred diplomacy to war. The cardinal appreciated that the economy of France was in poor shape to withstand a prolonged war. But Fleury's royal influence could not match that of the militaristic anti-Habsburg faction. The leader of this faction, Marachel de Belleisle, was nominated as royal envoy to certain German states which supported Bavarian claims against the Habsburg Empire. The result was a series of anti-Austrian alliances formed among various states throughout 1741. In May, Bavaria and Spain concluded the Treaty of Nymphenberg. In June, France and Frederick II of Prussia agreed to take joint action against Austria. Prussia had already exhibited its military prowess by soundly defeating an Austrian army at Mollwitz, Silesia, in April.

If Maria Theresa's enemies appeared to present a united front, her allies were causing her acute embarrassment. George II of England was fearful that his German state of Hanover could fall to either the French or Prussian military. In order to prevent such an occurrance, the English monarch entered into a secret convention with these two states which he hoped would secure Hanover's neutrality. This diplomatic move, made without the English government's knowledge, effectively prevented that country from assisting Austria in its hour of need. The Dutch also failed to answer Austria's call for assistance.

The main threat to Austria came from the Franco-Bavarian invasion of Bohemia, led by Belleisle in October 1741. The Austrian capital of Vienna was threatened, and the Netherlands (modern Belgium), which Austria had acquired from Spain earlier in the century, were quickly overrun by a second French army.

However, the apparent united facade of Maria Theresa's enemies was paper-thin. In the same month as the invasion of Bohemia, the Convention of Klein-Schellendorf brought a truce between Austria and Prussia. The price which the empress had to pay for this respite in the east was the occupation of Silesia by Prussia. Nevertheless, it enabled the Austrians to concentrate their military forces on the Franco-Bavarian alliance rather than having to deploy them on two seperate fronts. This concentrated effort resulted in the defeat of Belleisle's armies in Bohemia, followed by the Austrian invasion of Bavaria. Such was Maria Theresa's success that for a short period Munich, the Bavarian capital, was in Austrian hands.

The war dragged on until 1748, with the fortunes of the principal combatants fluctuating. Early in the war, it appeared France had succeeded in dealing a crucial blow against the Austrian Empire. French pressure resulted in Charles Albert's installation as Emperor Charles VII in January 1742. Significantly, each of the eight electors supported the Bavarian candidate. Maria Theresa naturally clung to her title, refusing to accept what appeared to be inevitable.

Her perseverance proved successful; in January 1745, the death of Charles VII ended the Bavarian hold on the imperial crown. In September of that year, Maria Theresa was able to obtain her husband's election as emperor, and so the title retuned to the Habsburgs. Her husband's position was, however, a sinecure; Maria Theresa was the power behind the throne, and continued to direct the fortunes of the empire and the Austrian lands.

From 1728-40, no gold coins were struck bearing dates of the intervening years. The second and final series of gold Louis XV coins were issued between 1740-74. This second issue, unlike the first, contained few types, just the two, the one and the half Louis d'or. Whether the ever-deepening economic crisis was primarily responsible for the paucity of type variation is difficult to establish.

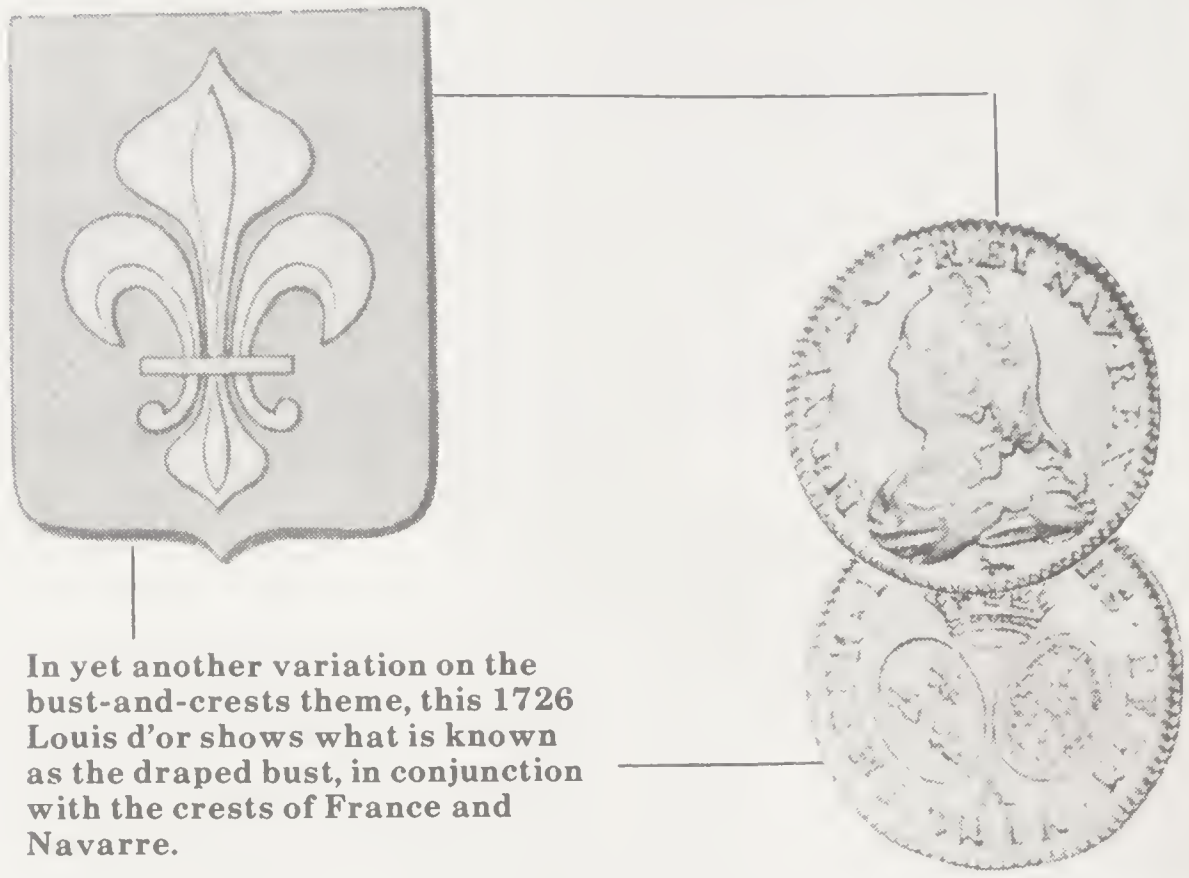
The first gold coins of the second issue covered the dates 1740-65.The obverse legend reads "Lud XV D. G. Fr et Nav. Rex." The main design shows Louis' mature head (left), and is generally known as the mature-head issue. The reverse legend reads "Chrs. Regn. Ving. Imp." The date is included in the legend at the 11 o'clock position. The reverse design is comprised of two oval shields bearing the crowned arms of France and Navarre.

From 1766-74, the issue consisted of the two and the one Louis d'or. Typewise, these coins were very similar to those of the mature-head issue, except the obverse design depicts the old laureate head, draped shoulder (left). This issue is known as the old-head issue.



In yet another variation on the bust-and-crests theme, this 1726 Louis d'or shows what is known as the draped bust, in conjunction with the crests of France and Navarre.

The 19th century was a time of change which fundamentally altered the structure of European society. This period has been considered by many authorities as the watershed dividing the medieval system of social order from that of the emergent modern state. Throughout Europe, the intensity of this change was uneven in its application. The forces of reaction were still actively engaged in the protection of their rights and privileges up to the eve of the French Revolution.

The elements shaping this fundamental change were social, economic and political. Eighteenth-century society was stratified into orders rather than classes. The order to which an individual belonged was hereditary and based on social esteem, or the lack of it, together with the rights, privileges, obligations, and duties attributable to that particular order. Dress was a type of uniform; each individual's station in life could be immediately determined, sinceno member of a lower order was peritted to wear the garments assigned to a higher order. Strict adherence to the sumptuary laws thus ensured differentiation between the various orders. Upward movement was therefore extremely rare, and an individual's economic status secondary to his social station. Wealth as a determinant of social rank only slowly emerged as the century progressed; large scale economic, industrial and political changes — in France, the Industrial Revolution and the Revolution of 1789 — were required before such considerations began to play their part.

The economic realities of the pre-industrial era were related to the ordered social scale. A society dependent on a subsistent economy is always at the mercy of famine or plague. At the whim of nature, the numbers making up that society can be decimated. Thus, a strict, hierachical social structure is necessary to maintain unity, meaning and purpose. The individual's role in life was furthermore deeply imbued with the Christian tradition of predestination; life was preordained and unchangable. Towards the end of the century these attitudes began to change, as the structure of society was affected by the increasing development of the cash economy, the emergence of industrialization and the intellectual assault on the traditions, social customs and institutions which hitherto had been the cement of society. But despite the profound nature of these changes, their effects on society were cumulative rather than revolutionary.

The ever-increasing activity in the commercial and industrial sectors of Europe's advanced states in no way lessened the role of agriculture. The 18th century is especially important, because for the first time demographic growth necessitated agricultural development. Hitherto, the staple diet of the vast majority of the population, especially the poor, was bread. Therefore, when wheat shortages occurred, whether through war, pestilence or adverse weather conditions, the effects could be catastrophic. It has been estimated that throughout Louis XV's reign, the number of beggars thronging the streets of Paris was never less than 30,000. The bulk of these were rural workers who for various reasons had been forced off the land and into the metropolis in search of work.

Unlike other advanced states, France's agricultural output does not appear to have kept pace with its demographic growth. Although statistics for the period are extemely unreliable, it has been estimated that France's population of France, about 20 million by 1710, increased to approximately 28 million by the 1790's. With static agricultural output, an ever-increasing population and frequent periods of acute grain shortages, the French government feared the potential social unrest which food riots could trigger. Several historians have cited the bread shortage as contributing to the outbreak of the French Revolution.

As the century progressed, the growth of the centralized bureaucracy was to some extent checked by the French parliaments through the use of remonstrances. In a like manner, the provincial and urban authorities, possessing right and privileges of ancient seigniorial lineage, exercised widespread powers which varied enormously from province to province and town to town. The overriding purpose of centralized government was to transform these disparate administrative methods into a universally applicable system. While centralized authority spelled the inevitable reduction of the powers of local magnates and the abolition of particularism, it was essential if the modern industrial state was to emerge.

The composition of the various French parliaments invariably contained numerous members of the provincial and urban elites; understandably, their interests invariably clashed with those of the central powers. Simply put, the bureaucracy and the parliament were on a collision course.

In the provinces and those urban areas furthest away from Paris, the landowner was all-powerful, and his influence in the seigniorial courts was paramount. The gradual eclipse of these provincial institutions, privileges and rights was largely brought about by increased urbanization and industrialization. Changes in traditional social interchange and conduct were necessary for the establishment of an efficient central administration. Throughout Europe such changes were taking place, differing in degree, format and application according to their geographical location. Generally, the changes were more radical in economically advanced areas; western Europe therefore experienced more fundamental changes than the central and eastern areas of the continent. But there were many exceptions. In the west, France was probably the greatest example of an advanced state unable to cope with the changing conditions.

The 18th-century phenomenon known as the Enlightenment was the culmination of this progressive secularization of western society. The discovery of the New World, increasing contact with the Orient and the spread of trade and commerce to the edges of the then-known world revealed societies and customs which were sharply different from those of European man, and which demanded toleration from the Europeans. The development of science by such outstanding individuals as Copernicus, Kepler and Galileo also helped erode the church's authority. The scientific exercise of logic and rationalism gave rise to the scientific genius of Isaac Newton and his theory of the physical order of the universe, and the mathematical exactitude of its immutable laws.

The progressive secularization of society thus gave rise to the 18th-century Enlightenment, an intellectual movement that was first and foremost French. The propagation of these new ideas owed much to the Parisian salons, venues where intellectuals, knowledgeable politicians and men of letters regularly met to exchange the latest ideas and discourse on current affairs, philosophy, morality, and political science.

Possibly the most fundamental of all Enlightenment ideas was the belief that human intellectualism could channel contradictions, disparate facts and a chaotic world view into a systematic whole. Once man had achieved this aim, he would be able to control and direct his own destiny, solving his problems through the application of reason and intellegence.

(Paradoxically, many of those who were influenced by the Enlightenment, especially its rational and scientific elements, were also interested in the pursuing the irrational. This occurred most markedly in France and manifested itself in the more extreme forms of Freemasonry, religious mysticism and excessive ritualism. Similarly, astrology was widely popular, and brought in its wake the usual following of charlatans and conmen. To a large degree, this upsurge of interest in mysticism and irrationalism was assisted by the imperfect standards of scientific knowledge to which European man ascribed. It was therefore not surprising that the occult, magic and science became one subject for many, even those who were close to the center of scientific development.)

Although France was the center from which the ideas of the movement radiated, many of the movement's tenets originated from outside sources. Where this occurred, these ideas were "Frenchified" and absorbed into the doctrines of the movement. The tenets of the Enlightenment were also adopted variously in different countries. In Germany, the comparative absence of the anti-religious element contrasted markedly with its involvement in France. In Russia, the effects of Enlightenment ideas were relatively moderate. Where they occurred, they tended to follow the German version rather than the French.

Though the Enlightenment had great significance for the 18th century as well as the future, its ideology appealed only to a small elite at the very apex of society. The mass of semi-literate and uneducated people was oblivious to the movement and its significance. Those monarchs known as "enlightenment despots" also did not necessarily adhere to such ideology. Not all of them were prepared to apply the theoretical tenets of the movement, especially if such action could in any way threaten the existing hierarchical structure of society.

Even monarchs unmoved by the new ideology were at times capable of instituting radical changes. For example, Maria Theresa, though highly conservative, had a reign noted for the beneficial changes it brought the Holy Roman Empire.

From the middle of the 18th century the cult of the French Physiocrats also made its influence felt in European intellectual circles. Quesnay was the acknowledged leader of this group of writers, which included Turgeot, Dupont de Nemours, and the elder Mirabeau. These individuals directed their intellectual activities towards domestic economic problems. High on their list of priorities for the economic wellbeing of society was the study of demography.

The basic physiocratic tenet was that true wealth was represented by land, and not by precious metals, commerce, or industry. This viewpoint contrasted sharply with that of the Mercantilists, who placed great importance on the expansion of commerce, trade, and industry under the auspices and supervision of the State. As such, the Physiocrats' concept of economic freedom, incorporating the phrase, "laissez-faire"

I have a German coin with what looks like two letters punched close together for a mint mark. What is it?

A recurring query from new collectors of the German series. Your coin is a 50 pfennig dated between 1919 and 1922. The "two letters" are actually one — a script "E", which looks almost like a combination of a "G" and "E". This is the Muldenhutte (now in East Germany) mint mark.

Order of Malta coin.

I'm confused by the "Malta" and "Order of Malta" listings. What's the connection?

The Order of Malta has a lengthy history dating back to the Crusades, when it was founded, in 1099, as the Sovereign Military Hospitaller Order of St. John of Jerusalem. Later, the headquarters was on the island of Malta (1530-1798), and the order ruled the island. Currently, its headquarters is in Rome. The island of Malta later came under French and then British rule. It is now an independent republic in the commonwealth.

What does the "F" or "FR" on the Order of Malta coins stand for?

They are abbreviations for "fra," or brother.

What is largess money?

"Largess" is defined as generous giving, and largess coins were a popular giveaway in the 16th to 18th centuries. Swedish King Gustavus Vasa I is credited with starting the practice in 1528. Coronations, weddings, births, and funerals were common causes for the striking and issuing of such coins. The pactice of throwing coins to the public ended after several riots, deaths and numerous injuries occured among those scrambling for the coins.

Did you get "Anna" and "Anne" straightened out on British coins?

Several astute Latin teachers took me to task for telling tales. "Anna" is the Latin spelling for "Anne," and since at that time it was far from a dead language, its use was common if not commanded on coins of the realm. Thanks, teachers.

Speaking of languages, can you trace Charles through some of the countries?

Charles in England, Charles in France, Carlo in Spain and Portugal, Karl in Germany, and Karol in Czechoslovakia.

Are any countries still using "scheidemuenze?"

One of the meanings of the Germanic term is coins that do not have an intrinsic value (meaning their metallic content) that is equal to the face value. Technically, almost all of the world's coins, except for some small denominations, fail to meet this test and are classed as scheidemuenze. As a practical matter, both Austria and Germany still refer to their minor coins as scheidemuenze.

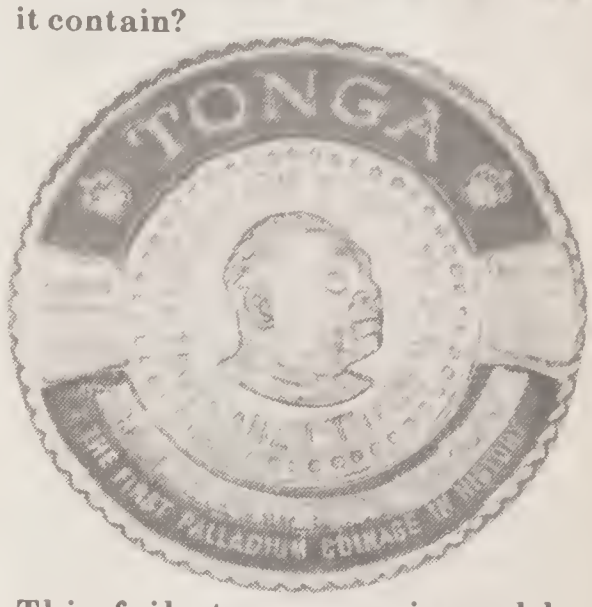
Is there a genuine Suez Canal five-franc token of 1865, issued by a company that worked on the canal?

Ch. and A. Bazin issued such a token, but the one you are more likely to run into is the fantasy piece bearing the name of Borel Lavelley et Compie. These fakes were a by-product of the Yom Kipper War and were produced to take advantage of the interest in the canal aroused by the conflict.

Did the Germans invent the swastika?

The emblem was adapted from a figure traced back to Corinth where it was used on a coin in the sixth century B.C. Collectors may be startled to find it used as a good luck symbol on numerous U.S. tokens of the early 20th century.

I have a quarter-hau from Tonga, which is made of palladium. How much of the metal does it contain?



This foil stamp was issued by Tonga to mark both a coronation and Tonga's palladium coins.

There are three such Tongan coins — quarter-, half- and one-hau — but my records don't show the fineness. Reader help on this?

I have what appears to be a medal with a design similar to a gold coin, but without a date, and the word "Spielmunze." Can you identify it?

"Spielmunze" is German for play money. Your piece is a game counter or token, similar to our current poker chips. Many of the pieces are direct copies of contemporary coins.

(laisser-passer), was inimical to the strait-jacket mercantilist economic doctrines.

In contrast to the all-embracing powers of mercantilist central authorities, the Physiocrats required that legislation be framed to ensure individual liberty, security and property. The movement was also imbued with the belief that societal ills would respond to the application of science and rationalism. Enlightened despotism was supported by these economic philosophers; an enlightened monarch would apply laws fairly, with utmost regard for individual rights. In such an ideal society, allegiance to royal authority would freely result, and the church's influence in monarchical circles would vanish. In respect to anti-clerical ideas the Physiocrats and philosophers were one. ■

Copenhagen to host token conference

Copenhagen, Denmark, will be the site of the second European Token Conference Nov. 3, according to conference director Jorgen Somod.

A similar conference was held in Amsterdam in September 1984, Yosef Sa'ar, Ta Doar 533, 88 104 Elat, Israel, world contact outside of Europe, said.

The conference fee will be $14, Somod said, and will include a copy of all papers given at the event and list of participants. For those unable to attend, the same fee will provide the donor the same papers and list.

Features at the event will include a bourse, auction, exhibits and a slide presentation.

Somod said events in Copenhagen will be held at Tannhaeuser Bar, Holbergsgade 17.

pesos and 500 pesos in gold — in proof and uncirculated versions. The gold coins will be struck in .900 fine metal and will bear a "Ley .900" inscription, while the proof coins will carry no fineness inscription.

Much the same situation will prevail with the silver coins. Uncirculated pieces will carry a "Ley .720" inscription, while the silver proof coins will be struck in .925 fine silver and will not carry a fineness inscription.

Casso said a 16-coin set is planned, though that number may change as the championship nears. During the interview, Casso produced proofs for myself and Don Mariano A. Montero of the convention organizing committee to examine. The three silver and two gold proofs were well-designed and very well-struck, showing the capabilities of the mint.

Casso said there is no firm release date for the proof coins and no pricing information on the proofs. All the coins, however, will have legal-tender status.

During the interview, Casso conducted a tour of the Legaria Mint, a modern, well-conceived plant featuring state-of-the-art production technology. During the tour, dies were being prepared for Mexico's other new commemorative series, a two-coin set marking the 75th anniversary of the revolution. A 200 pesos will be struck in cupronickel and a 500 pesos in .925 fine silver.

Casso also discussed coins on the drawing board for the 17th anniversary of Mexican independence, a 200-peso cupronickel piece and a 1,000-peso gold coin.

At the same time, delegates were able to see the 450th-anniversary medals being struck and the dies engraved for the convention medals, which continuethe Mexican Numismatic Society's series on the coinage of Mexico. This year's medal depicts the coinage of Emperor Maximilian, with the dies prepared from the original coinage dies of the 1867 Maximilian peso.

(We were able to handle these original peso dies, along with several coin and medal dies. All dated dies had the date's last digit removed to prevent unauthorized usage.)

Delegates were also invited to view an exhibit on Mexican history depicted on coins, which was on display until June 13 at the old Iturbide Palace in Mexico City.

One of the convention's highlights was an informal junior program organized by SNM President Anna Maria Cross de Torres and conducted by Montero. The roundtable discussion covered numismatic basics. Coins and currency were drawn by the juniors, with Luis Ricardo Martinez Barraso winning a 1984 Libertad.

The convention's last day featured appearances by Mexico City Mint General Director Gomez, Nora Hussey, director of the Denver Mint, and Tito Real, special-coinage director at Denver. Hursey and Real were guests of honor at the closing dinner-dance.

The educational forum featured Alejandro Cortina's presentation on "The Cristeros War (1926-1941): Its History and Numismatics." Exhibits were highlighted by F.M. Rose's "Resellos Orientales."

The convention auction, conducted by Cortina, consisted of 950 lots of Mexican-related material. Cortina said participation was very good, prices for medals and colonial coinage were strong and cartones, republican coinage and the modern series all did well. Rare lots of revolutionary coinage also brought high prices.

One of the sale's sleepers was a unique copper medal, hand-engraved for the National Congress of History in 1963 and awarded to Gen. M. Penette and Cpt. J. Castaingt for their publication "La Legion Extranjera en la Intervencion Francesa."

Most of the U.S. dealers said sales were far better than expected, with a heavy turnout of new collectors contributing to the boost.

During the convention, representatives of Numismaticas de Guadalajara were on the floor to promote their international numismatic convention, which will be held Oct. 25-27.

The Mexico City convention was sponsored by the SNM in conjunction with the Azteca Numismatic Association, the Rev Mex Society and the Azteca Numismatic Association. The 1986 convention will be held May 12-17 at the same site.

BUILDING

Heritage Canada. Work was temporarily halted for three days, but the suspension was lifted May 10 when all parties realized that there was no alternative but to disassemble and rebuild, as the mint was doing.

Over the last three weeks, Denis Cudahy, the mint's vice president of manufacturing, has been meeting with the Federal Heritage Buildings Review Board and the National Capital Commission to discuss details of the mint's plans. The discussions concern how the building will be restored and not how it is being taken down.

In a barrage of media coverage in Ottawa, the mint was criticized for not obtaining the prior approval of these two bodies before proceeding with its renovation, even though they both had prior knowledge of mint plans.

Mint Master James Corkery said at the time that he felt everything had been done the right way. "In our hearts we felt that we were doing the right thing," he said. "We had good intentions."

In fact, although the Department of Public Works owns the building, the mint controls it. As a Crown corporation, it is technically not obliged to submit its renovation plans to federal officials for approval.

Nevertheless, mint officials have been very receptive to all comments and criticism voiced on the subject — even if the objecting parties have no legal right to review mint policy.

Mint public relations chief Murray Church echoed Corkery's statements: "We want to keep the building looking like the great structure it is. We are conscious of the great public trust we hold and the responsibility we have to care for and look after the building.

"Our objective remains unchanged. We want to make the building into a magnificent tour facility for all visitors, including the handicapped."

The lesson that may presumably be learned from all of this is that with $22 million and the best engineers and builders available (all the king's horses and all the king's men), even the Royal Canadian Mint can be put back together again.

Minors, notes keen at Downie auction

Australian pre-decimal bank notes, gold coins and minors — including what was described as "the key coin in the entire Commonwealth series" — attracted keen bidding at P.J. Downie's auction No. 189, held in Melbourne April 24.

In fact, the sale's highest-priced lot was a bank note, a £20 Collins-Allen in good fine with strong color, which brought A$7,000 against a A$6,000 estimate.

In addition, a £50 Cerutty-Collins, only fine but very rare, sold for A$2,200, A$700 above estimate; a fine £10 Cerutty-Collins sold for A$2,100; a 10-shilling Coombs-Wilson star note sold for A$1,250 in extremely fine; and a £1 Collins-Allen "Rainbow Pound" in good sold for A$1,200 against a A$1,000 estimate.

Downie's traditionally high-powered gold-coin section was topped by a proof 1899-M milled-edge half sovereign, which sold for A$6,500. It was joined by an 1852 type-two Adelaide pound with a slight reverse-rim imperfection, which brought A$4,600 in better than very fine, and a very fine 1855 Sydney-mint type-one very fine sovereign, which sold for A$2,700.

While prices for Australian gold were at or slightly below estimate, the Downie-described "key coin of the Commonwealth series" exceeded estimate by

The "key coin," a 1930 penny, brought A$4,200 April 24.

A$700. The about fine 1930 penny sold for A$4,200 against a A$3,500 estimate.

The sale realized A$191,810, less a 7.5 percent buyer's premium.

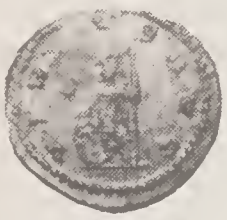
ANCIENT ROMAN TREASURE

Saloninus

Due to a fortunate purchase of an exciting hoard of high grade ancient Roman coins I can offer these genuine "antoniniani" or double denarii as part of an offer to introduce you to the fascination of ancient coin collecting. FREE with any purchase of $100. or more, I will deliver the book ROMAN COINS and How to Collect Them, a $9.95 retail value. The collecting and study of ancient numismatics is much simpler than you might guess. Order now and expand your horizons.

Valerian I

The hoard now being offered is largely of the silver-copper alloy coin, the "antoninianus", or double denarius. One of these coins was about the day's wage for a common laborer in ancient Rome. The hoard was buried about 275 AD in the Middle East, then a strategic and highly important region of the Roman Empire. Most of the hoard was struck during the reign of the emperor Gallienus, 253 to 268 AD, who was a successful ruler considering that his reign was spent fighting one border war after another, as well as suppressing revolts by ambitious generals within the empire. Other coins in the hoard include those of his father and co-emperor Valerian I, 253-260 AD, the wife of Gallienus, Salonina, and their children, Valerian II and Saloninus. Later rulers represented include Claudius II, 268-270, Aurelian 270-275, his wife Severina, and Vabalathus, a joint ruler with Aurelian of the city of Palmyra in the Middle East.



Typical Reverse

The coins in the hoard have almost no wear, but the detail varies with the strength of the strike and the color ranges from choice almost full silver, to medium billon gray color and to oxidized surfaces with a coppery look. The pressure of paying for his extensive military campaigns led to increasing debasement of the empire's coinage.

Salonina

I can offer the following coins of Gallienus:
A Nice extra fine with almost full silvering, each $39.00
B. Sharp detail but with gray surfaces — still very pleasing, each $19.00
Ten different reverse types 160.00
C. Study lots: coppery splotches, corrosion, uneven strikes lots of ten different emperors, family members, or different reverses. Satisfaction guaranteed! Lot of ten 79.00
D The following family members and other rulers are available in limited quantities. First come, first served!
Valerian I, father of Gallienus, each 19.00
Salonina, wife of Gallienus, each 19.00
Saloninus, son of Gallienus, each 39.00
Valerian II, son of Gallienus, each 39.00
The above are middle range-good detail, some silvering with some copper showing, or a billon gray color.
E A small group of Claudius II with almost full silvering, each 39.00
F A small group of the scarce Aurelian and Vabalathus joint rulership of Palmyra. Coppery or some silvering, each 29.00

Valerian II

Overseas buyers dominate sale

More than 40 percent of the lots went to overseas buyers April 20 at a James Norwich (England) auction of coins, medals, bank notes and bonds.

Leading the way was an Elizabeth I gold sovereign, which brought £1,825. Other noteworthy realizations included £325 for a 1625 Charles I unite, £675 for a 1983 proof set, £640 for a 1981 proof set; £810 for a 1658 commonwealth crown, and £215 for a 1656 commonwealth half crown.

Also, a 1691 good very fine crown brought £620, a good very fine 1703 VIGO crown sold for £620, a proof UNDECITIO 1847 gothic crown brought £325 in good extremly fine, and an 1831 proof halfcrown sold for £620.

Top price for a banknote was £100 for a 1942 Portuguese escudo note.

Catalogs are available from James of Norwich, 33, Timberhill, Norwich NR1 3LA, England.

B&M to auction Kosoff collection

The Abe Kosoff collection of ancient, world and U.S. coins will be sold by Bowers and Merena in a sale tentatively scheduled for Nov. 4-6 in New York City.

Kosoff, generally regarded to be the dean of American numismatists when he died in 1983, was the founder of the Numismatic Gallery, a frequent contributor to many numismatic publications, an active American Numismatic Association member and recipient of the Farran Zerbe award, a prime mover in the establishment of the ANA's certification service, and founding president of the Professional Numismatists' Guild.

Kosoff and the Numismatic Gallery handled most of the major collections of the '40s and '50s, including the Michael Higgy collection, F.C.C. Boyd's "World's Greatest Collection," the Adolph Friedman collection, and the Williams, Morris, Craig, and Menjou collections.

In preparation for the sale, Q. David Bowers is writing a biography of Kosoff, which will be available in softcover and deluxe hardcover versions. A large, lavishly illustrated catalog is also planned.

For more information, write Auctions by Bowers and Merena, Box 1224, Wolfeboro, N.H. 03894.

Mid-America show set for July

One of the Midwest's largest privately run shows, the 200-table Mid-America Coin Show, will be held July 12-14 at Milwaukee's MECCA arena. Dealer setup will begin at 6 p.m. Thursday; dealers without tables will be admitted to the show on setup night for a $15 donation to the Wisconsin Council for Tangible Assets. Hotel and airline discounts are available. (Kevin Foley, P.O. Box 589, Milwaukee, Wis. 53201.)

The 150th anniversary of German railroads is being commemorated by a year-long series of displays and events in Nuremburg — and by a .925-fine silver medal. The piece features Germany's first locomotive, the "Adler von Stephenson," on one side and a modern German locomotive on the other. Total mintage for the 40-millimeter, Berlin Mint-struck piece is 2,000. (Medacoin International, 421 E. Carson St., Suite 189, Las Vegas, Nev. 89101.)

Mint-state uncirculated Canadian coins are getting harder and harder to come by, according to the latest issue of the Canadian Coin Dealer Newsletter. Newsletter publisher Michael Findlay attributes the shortage to low mintages, the unavailability of 19th-century collector strikes and the tendency for Canadian-coin collectors to hang onto their coins. (Canadian Coin Dealer Newsletter, P.O. Box 37, Station A, Toronto, Ontario M5W 1A2, Canada.)

Wyatt offers unusual list

Prison-camp coins, counterstamped pieces, French jetons and gambling tokens, early German coins, and a diverse assortment of world crowns and minors are included in Charles E. Wyatt's list No. 27.

The list includes two Lorraine die trials, a Mainz die trial, an unlisted Burundi 100 francs, and several 18th-century Utrecht pieces, and is available from Wyatt, P.O. Box 178623, San Diego, Calif. 92117.

Aaron, Clute contest CNA presidency

Robert Aaron and Stanley Clute will face off in the Canadian Numismatic Association presidential election. Aaron, of Toronto, and Clute, High River, Alberta, are well-known collectors and writers. Three regional directorships will also be contested: Paul Johnston and Bill Cross are running for the Toronto-region post, George Beach and Maxwell Grail will square off for Central United States and Garry Lewis will run against Dick Becker in Eastern United States.

Board elections are also being conducted by the Numismatic Literary Guild. The entire five-member board will be replaced in a mail-ballot election. Three two-year terms and two one-year terms are slated to be filled. Current board members are Kenneth Bressett, William Fivaz, Lee Martin, Donn Pearlman, and Anthony Swiatek. (Numismatic Literary Guild, Route 2, Box 11, Iola, Wis. 54945.)

Meanwhile, the Japanese coin bulletin Taisei Monthly is resuming publication with the June 1985 issue after a 15-month layoff. Subscription rates vary on destination and type of delivery. (Tasei Stamps and Coins, Ohno Building, No. 1-19-8, Kyobashi, Chuo-Ku, Tokyo 104, Japan.)

Elsewhere in Asia, King O. Mao was elected president of the Hong Kong Numismatic Society for 1985-86. George K. Chen was elected first vice president, Ma Tak Wo second vice president, Cheng Po-hung honorary secretary, and Law Man Yiu honorary treasurer. (Hong Kong Numismatic Society, G.P.O. Box 8977, Hong Kong.)

Five clubs and societies will hold meetings at the 14th annual New York International Numismatic Convention, to be held Nov. 30-Dec. 2 in the Sheraton Exhibit Centre of the Sheraton Centre Hotel. Groups meeting include the International Bank Note Society, the Lithuanian Numismatic Association, Numismatics International, the Oriental Numismatic Society, the Russian Numismatic Society, La Societe pour l'Etude de la Numismatique Francaise, and the Society for Medieval Numismatics. The American Numismatic Society will also have a booth. (New York International Numismatic Convention, P.O. Box 2133, Teaneck, N.J. 07666)

The Champney trial strikes are featured in the Spring issue of the Journal of the Russian Numismatic Society. The 1858 ruble, Moskva baroque kopecks, Kholodkovski's catalogs, and Persian overstrikes on Russian coppers are also examined. (Russian Numismatic Society, Box F334, Akron, Ohio 44308.)

In addition to its International Youth Year commemorative, the Swedish Mint/Myntverket has issued a medal commemorating the 550th anniversary of the Swedish parliament, The design is an update of Erik Lindborg's 1935 design with a revised reverse by sculptor Bo Thoren. The 45-millimeter piece has been minted in 18-karat gold (35 struck), .999-fine silver (1,500 struck) and bronze (1,500). No orders will be filled in July. (Myntverket, Swedish Mint, Box 401, S-631 06 Eskilstuna, Sweden.)

The computerized Calendar provides listings of reported coin shows, educational forums, and similar events arranged by region and date. Contact addresses, the projected number of tables, and the fees charged for tables, as that information is available, is printed the first time a listing is incorporated in the Calendar, then repeated quarterly thereafter in the fourth issues of February, May, August, and November; the numeric sequence appearing on the last line of repeated listings indicates the issue in which the complete listing appeared (0728, for example, is July 28). Listings include all events scheduled within five weeks of the issue date; major events published one year in advance, others appear initially in the first issue following submission. Abbreviations used: A — admission charge; T — number of tables; F — table fee; N/A — not available; ‡ — commercially sponsored show or event sponsored by a club scheduling more than two events annually. Other data required for listing: name and address of show site, and the name and address of the bourse chairman or other contact person.

USUAL MAIL BID RULES

1. Bid by lot, not by piece. Lots are not to be broken without permission of seller.
2. No buyer or unlimited bids accepted. (A buy bid is when a bidder tells an auctioneer to buy the lot for him at reasonable cost over highest bidder.)
3. Postage and insurance will be added to invoices.
4. No commission to be charged by seller. The high bid represents the maximum selling price of a lot.
5. Terms: Cash upon receipt of invoice — invoice to be mailed by seller within 10 days after closing date of the sale.
6. Mail Bid Sales will close 10 days from date of publication of World Coin News unless otherwise stated by seller.
7. Seller may require a deposit to be sent with bids as a guarantee that high bidder will honor his bids. It is not returnable if high bidder fails to honor his bids (unless excused by seller). It shall be used as a partial payment on successful bids. Any deposit requirement will be clearly stated in the seller's advertisement. Unsuccessful bidders will have their deposits returned within 3 days following the closing date of the sale.
8. Improperly described lots must be postmarked for return within 5 days after receipt. Errors in bidding are the responsibility of the buyer.
9. Exceptions to any of the above rules must be stated in the seller's advertisement.
10. A Mail Bid Sale is not an unrestricted sale unless so stated by the seller. The seller has the right to reject a bid for any reason whatsoever.

1980-81 SEEMS to have been the peak outflow of Chinese coins from the mainland. Though the flow has slowed considerably, there is still a large, though diminishing supply available. Formerly rare coins are still available at great bargains. Scarce coins can still be had at great bargains. This situation can't last much longer. This is the late golden age of cash collection. My next oriental list will be ready late July. Write now and get a free 1,300 year old coin. Will correspond with anyone about oriental coins, beginners to advanced welcome. 20 PERCENT CASH DISCOUNT

World Coin News offers a big built in profit margin with a 20 percent discount off the regular rate. Take advantage of this savings by submitting payment with copy (Cash rate printed above). The advertiser/client assumes 100% debt repayment responsibility in the event of adv. agency default.

Display advertising only. Payment accompanying an advertising order or in payment of an account must be provided in the form of a U.S. funds check drawn on a U.S. Canadian or Mexican bank; personal or company checks, bank money orders or cashier's checks or similar instruments drawn on foreign banks are not acceptable, whether payment in U.S. funds or the national currency, unless the total payment provided is sufficient to cover all bank clearing and foreign exchange charges.

CONTRACT RATE

Potential advertisers are invited to write for detailed information on money saving 3, 13 and 52 week contract advertising rates The 20 percent cash discount rates are also available for contract advertisers.

Trade and financial references required from new accounts Write for form.

PROOF OF PUBLICATION

Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed each week. We regrettably cannot provide this service to classified word advertisers and continue to maintain the low classified ad rate

RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any returned merchandise bearing a postmark within five working days of its receipt by a customer Purchasers seeking to obtain ANACS judgments as the basis for retention must notify advertisers of their intent within the applicable return privilege period

AD DEADLINE EVERY TUESDAY

Display Advertising Requirements

All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc., reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in their discretion they see fit, for any reason whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as an acceptance of all rates and conditions under which advertising is at the time sold. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions, which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom made against the publishers. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, fire, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The advertiser / client assumes 100% debt payment responsibility in the event of advertising agency default.

Classified Advertising Requirements

Classified ads received after the closing date for any issue will be held for the next issue. When changing copy or requesting cancellation of a previously submitted ad, provide classification number, issue date and page references if possible. Include remittance for additional wordage. Refunds are not provided for unexpired insertions of cancelled classified ads, but appropriate credit will be granted, which may be utilized with future classified ad orders. Classified ads are not accepted by phone and must be accompanied by full remittance.

General Advertising Conditions

The publisher reserves the right to edit any advertising copy to conform with its standard advertising policies and to reject any ad which in its opinion is unethical or objectionable for any reason This publication does not guarantee and disclaims all knowledge of the right of seller or buyer to contract The prices quoted in any ad are subject to change without notice in response to fluctuating market conditions. Typewritten copy is preferred. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from longhand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telphone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error. Post Office box number ads are allowed, but the permanent home address or place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before any such advertisements may be presented. Minors are required to furnish a certificate of responsibility from their parents or guardian before their advertising can be accepted All mail bid advertisers are subject to the publisher's "usual mail bid rules" as published in each issue under CLASSIFIED MARKETPLACE classification number 2, unless other rules are specifically stated in their ads Advertisements offering prizes, grab bags or contests of any nature are not acceptable unless prior written approval has been obtained from the U S Postal System, Washington, D C Advertisements offering modern copies, restrikes, reproductions or fantasy pieces which violate the Hobby protection Acts are not acceptable

WORLD GOLD CROWNS RARITIES

Photo's Actual Size

GOLD COINS

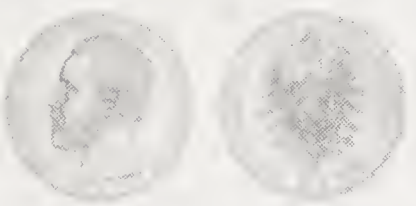
5-625 CZECHOSLOVAKIA 1932 1 Ducat, Fr 11 — An impressive type coin commemorating the Sokol Movement The details are softly struck but with full wire rims indicating that it was struck under great pressure Striking and beautiful in all detail A choice Unc $235.00

5-626 CZECHOSLOVAKIA 1936 10 Ducats, Fr 4, Mintage of only 633 — An impeccable coin, problem free and just lovely Very Rare and an extremely nice BU $1,550.00

5-627 ETHIOPIA EE1917 (1925) 1 Werk, Fr-26, Y-26, Empress Zauditu — We have not handled many of this rare type They are struck from ill prepared, crude dies We believe this is one of the nicest (for the type) we have seen Some bagging but so Rare XF/AU $880.00

5-628 FRANCE 1909A 100 Francs, Fr-327, Second Republic — A superb specimen of this "Angel" type with full mint lustre Aside from a few minute surface marks, it is choice Brilliant Unc and one of the best we have ever seen $795.00

5-629 FRANCE 1904A 50 Francs, Fr-328, Standing Angel — A very scarce type coin seldom offered Ours is a lustrous AU and problem free $1,475.00



5-630 GERMANY Oldenburg 1874B 10 Mark, Fr-64, Nicholas Frederick — A one year type for this king who reigned for 47 years. Very Rare and cataloging $4,000 We offer a choice AU/Unc piece for $2,850.00

5-631 GERMANY Saxony 1873E 20 Mark, Fr-91, John — A two year type coin for this ruler though he reigned for almost 20 years. Dresden Mint A nice Unc $375.00

5-632 GERMANY Wurttemberg 1906F 10 Mark, Fr-129, William II — A very nice Mint fresh specimen coin Very collectible in this grade and the fast German state (alphabetically) A superior coin BU $195.00

5-633 GREAT BRITAIN 1798 Pattern Guinea by C H Kuchler, Murdock 145, George III — Very Rare and missing in virtually all major British gold collections To our knowledge, the last time a coin of this type was offered was the Douglas Morris Specimen in 1974! We offer this lately toned and problem free Extremely Fine for $1,975.00

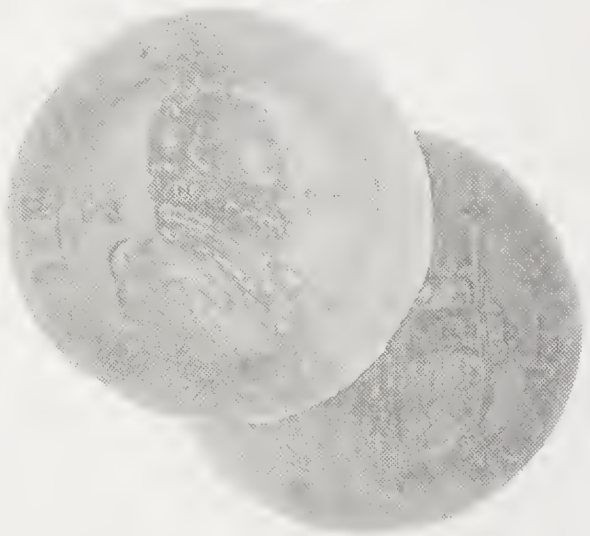
5-634 GREAT BRITAIN 1823 1 Sovereign, Fr 241, George IV — The rarest date of this type and almost never seen in the condition for the specialist who wants the best Choice AU $1,095.00

5-635 NORWAY 1876 20 Kronor, Fr 17, Oscar II — The last Swedish king of Norway Catalogues $450 and with nice surfaces A hint of friction otherwise a choice UNC $295.00

5-636 RUSSIA 1870 3 Rubles, Fr 147, Alexander II — We sold the last ones we offered quickly 3 Rubles are difficult to find in any grade This is slightly bagged AU, but still rare $295.00

5-637 RUSSIA 1871 3 Rubles, Fr 147, Alexander II — This coin is nicer than the preceeding one. Mint lustre and minimal contact marks. Very choice for the coins and Aunt Sofie likes it too! A nice lustrous Unc $335.00

CROWNS & MINORS



5-638 AUSTRIA 1617 1 Thaler (Half), D-3323, Maximillian — Nice even toning and minimal even wear highlight this early Thaler Maximillian as Archbishop Very pleasant and a good XF+ $175.00

5-639 CHINA 1923 1 Dollar, K-677, Tsao Kun (Civilian dress) — A lustrous coin with full nose Exceptionally clean fields and well struck An excellent Unc Well worth $220.00

5-640 GERMANY 1930F 3 Mark Proof Y 71.4 J 344 Vogelweide — A beautiful frosty exergue mirror surfaced Proof with a few lite friction marks An exceptionally nice coin with all the graces Surely a choice Proof $235.00

5-641 ITALY Tuscany 1803 1 Francescone, D-154, Charles Louis & Marie Louise Florence Mint — A large coin with nice toning and minimal wear Well struck and impressive with conjoined heads A really appealing XF $350.00

5-642 NETHERLANDS Holland 1746 1 Duit, Cr 2A — An early silver duit with a corralled lion A nice type and a good AU $95.00

5-643 NETHERLANDS Holland 1748 1 Duit, Cr 2A — Struck for the East Indies Company VOC A still different type and rarer than the other featured A nice AU/Unc $105.00

5-644 NETHERLANDS Utrecht 1750 1 Duit, Cr F2a — The double lion silver duit, quite different from the Holland type A slightly nicer AU Unc $65.00

5-645 RUSSIA 1839 1 Ruble, D-288, Nicholas I — Dedication of Borodino Monument — Choicely patinated with Prooflike surfaces. Light reverse field marks not detracting A very scarce commemorative and highly sought after Choice XF/AU $260.00
